

Risk Management Process (RMP)

Information risk is a key business element that affects and impacts all aspects of a company. A (new) risk management system in a company may well require implementation as a programme, rather than a project, due to its scope. For any such programme to be successful it must have proper governance, buy-in and contribution from senior management and involve the heads of all major departments within the company. It must ensure that all appropriate standards and certifications are known, and that the company is compliant from both a legal and regulatory perspective.
